This will be slightly strange --- an international sprint race without an obvious leader. None of the invitees are at their best when left in front so it's hard to see the pace being too strong. Top-level sprints at Sha Tin are typically won by the horses racing prominently, with the notable exception of Chautauqua, who came from a distant last when he rounded up Lucky Bubbles to win the 2016 Chairman's Sprint Prize in the final bound. Given the lack of obvious speed this year, the ideal position should be up close with cover.
